

Wales' own Valentine's Day held in honour of a fourth-century princess was given a retro feel in Rhyl.

Dydd Santes Dwynwen – the Welsh version of Valentine's Day – was marked in the town on Saturday.

Organised by Rhyl Town Council, Ghostbuskers community choir from Tape Music & Film brought music - including love songs and old favourites - to the high street.

But there was an extra treat for the first 100 people who came along with councillors handing out retro #LoveRhyl pin badges made for the occasion.

Rhyl mayor Cllr Ellie Chard said: "St Dwynwen is the patron saint of lovers and all us councillors love Rhyl. St Dwynwen's day seemed an ideal opportunity to gift limited-edition pin badges and share the passion we have for our town.

"Both the music and the badges were well received, and the singalong kick-starts another great year of free community events in the town."

St David's Day will be the next occasion marked by the town council with stilt walkers and music on the high street from 11am on February 29th.
